Cancer Services of Northeast Indiana would not exist without donors who care. It was true in 1944 and it is still true today. Gifts from individuals and families in 2021 accounted for 72% of the funding that makes possible all the help and care available to people with cancer.

People who have a firsthand experience with cancer understand how devastating the disease can be. Whether it is being blindsided by a diagnosis, the pain and difficulty of treatment, the anxiety of not knowing what comes next or watching a loved one struggle — it is an experience you don’t forget and one you hope no one else has to go through. For so many people this hope for something better leads them to become donors to Cancer Services.

Donations come in many forms — sending a check in memory and honor of a loved one, attending a fundraising event or organizing a fundraiser, committing to a monthly gift, or leaving a bequest when the time comes for a final gift.

Last year, two very generous women made such a gift as part of their estate plans.

Dianne Koch was a local business owner and high school teacher. She saw cancer up close and personal. She wanted to help others experiencing cancer, in meaningful and personal ways. She made plans for the remaining assets from the business she built with her husband, Steve, to be divided among five charities. In keeping with Dianne’s thoughtful approach to planning, Cancer Services’ board of directors earmarked a sizable portion of her gift to seed an endowment fund designed to provide long-term support for the future needs of Cancer Services. They also dedicated funds to spread the word about the services available so that people who need help know how to find it.

Elizabeth Clevenger lived a long life of almost 100 years. With no surviving family members, she sought to help an organization that she believed worthy of her life’s savings. Elizabeth was born and raised in a small town and so it seemed appropriate to use most of her gift to better serve people in the communities outside of Fort Wayne. Additionally, a portion of her gift was used for capital needs that sometimes get neglected.

Both women trusted that Cancer Services would be good stewards of these resources. The volunteers who serve on Cancer Services’ board understand the tremendous responsibility they have to safeguard the mission and make wise decisions for the future of this community treasure known as Cancer Services of Northeast Indiana.

Thank you for sharing this mission to help local families facing cancer. We are honored by your trust and respect and committed to being worthy stewards.

Laura Reber

During the height of the pandemic, Laura started experiencing frightening bouts of extreme nausea and vomiting. She felt fortunate to get an appointment with a gastrointestinal specialist who gave her an endoscopy. They found eleven polyps, including one that was malignant. Laura was diagnosed with stage I neuro gastric cancer, which is resistant to radiation and chemotherapy.

Cancer Services provided Laura with gas cards to reduce her travel expenses to the Cleveland Clinic and for medical appointments in Indianapolis. Her client advocate also helped her accept that the type of cancer she has means that cancer will always be part of her life.

Laura said her diagnosis has opened her eyes to what is important in life and the need to prioritize how she spends her time.

Cheryl jokes that volunteering at Cancer Services was part of her mid-life crisis, but also that it’s very much God-driven.

After she retired from Verizon, she read a book about how God always has a plan B for our lives. When she saw a request from Cancer Services for volunteer drivers that same week, she took it as her sign from God and called Cancer Services.

Flash forward 20 years and Cheryl is still driving clients to treatment.

“It’s the people I meet and the help I’m able to provide with something as simple as a ride and conversation that keeps me involved,” Cheryl said.

“I was especially pleased to see that ladies from Cobblestone Golf Course in Kendallville had donated a large sum. It was comforting to know that many of my friends who play in that annual golf tournament unknowingly had helped meet my needs via Cancer Services,” Donna said.

Donna was connected to Client Advocate Denise Glasser, who listened to her challenges and suggested ways that Cancer Services could help. Donna is grateful for her husband’s support and said he’s been a fantastic caregiver. She’s also grateful that Cancer Services recognizes the challenges caregivers face and provides them with massages as well as providing cancer patients with oncology massages.

Beth compares cancer to an unwanted visitor who overstays their welcome and always threatens to return. She said Cancer Services is the good friend who sees you through cancer’s visit.

The first person to tell her about Cancer Services was a nurse at the Lutheran Cancer Resource Center.

Beth was quickly connected to her client advocate, Gayle Bernard, who made sure she had safety equipment for her home shower. Gayle encouraged her to visit the wig salon and suggested free massages for Beth and her husband. Most of all, Gayle listened to Beth and her husband.

“We’ve learned cancer is a mental battle as much as a physical one. Having someone to help navigate some of the day-to-day stresses of this disease frees patients to mentally concentrate on treatment and recovery,” Beth said.
